RISING STAR DESIGNER CHLOE WARNER DESIGNS ANTIPODEAN RESTAURANT SOUTH FOOD + WINEBAR

San Francisco, CA,-- Rising star interior designer Chloe Warner creates a rugged-luxe interior to compliment bold Australian flavors at new restaurant South. Details of the restaurant include a custom Maori-inspired mural, engraved faux bois wallpaper, and an ostrich-embossed banquette. A sense of the modern-frontier pervades the space, which was inspired by natural elements like cork and wood, Southern-hemisphere fauna (antique prints hang salon-style on the walls) and Maori patterns. Combined with major statement-lighting by New Zealand designer David Trubridge and sleek Globus chairs, the space is both sexy and tough.

“I’m thrilled to be able to reach a new audience through restaurant design and think South is a destination in San Francisco. It references Australia and New Zealand in a completely fresh way that is worlds apart from the Outback look that we have become familiar with.” Said Chloe, adding, “designing it I kept in mind a fictional eccentric uncle who hunts, enjoys great wine and has a bawdy down-under sensibility, and tried to make him comfortable.”
